

space on ground floor. This means first I will have to demolish the present construction at ground floor and then construct the parking space (still at ground floor) and then subsequently first floor and second floor. This means for having an additional floor, I will have to re-build a house of three floors.

This is really too much for a retired person who will have to spend at least 3 times for construction only for getting benefit of an additional floor.

It is therefore suggested that there ~~there~~ should be a provision for allowing such cases of adding only one floor without the construction of parking space and demolishing the existing house. This can be permitted as a one time concession with a condition that further addition of new floor can be done only after providing for parking.

Kindly consider the suggestion sympathetically.

Thanking you
